If you have any concerns with the decision(s) referred to in this letter, you have the right to request an investigation and review by the Ombudsman under section 27(3) of the Local Government Official Information and Meetings Act 1987.

Please note that it is our policy to proactively release our responses to official information requests where possible. Our response to your request will be published shortly on Greater Wellington's website with your personal information removed.

Additional Information

We believe the information provided to you, on the importance and role of communications to local authorities and the communities they serve, will help provide context for future stories you may produce.

Local government entities have wide and varying roles across New Zealand. They protect our environment while also meeting the cultural, social and economic needs of our communities. They can be responsible for rubbish and recycling, leisure and recreation, parking and roads, properties and rates, environment management, flood protection and land management, provision of parks, public transport planning and funding, and even metropolitan water supply.

Various Acts of Parliament, such as the Local Government Act 2002 and the Resource Management Act 1991 guide what activities local government entities may be involved in.

A large degree of this work relies on consultation, transparency and communication to the public. This is married with a growing expectation from Mana Whenua and local communities that they be involved, early and through the design and delivery of such activities.

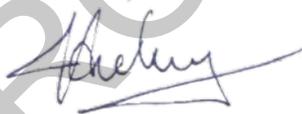

At a time when traditional news sources have consolidated, and news publications and programmes are constantly having to reinvent themselves against a backdrop of dwindling advertising revenue and online pressures, we feel it is more necessary than ever for journalists to work closely with local entities, something the Government has also recognised through its local democracy funding.

Journalists alongside the efforts of communications, media and design staff are essential to the democracy of our regions and the consultation, transparency and communication activities of local entities with communities.

The Ombudsman regularly reviews local authorities and their information practices, resources and systems against the Local Government Official Information and Meetings Act 1987, publishing its findings online.

Such a review of Greater Wellington in 2019 praised the 'strong culture of openness' at the regional council, describing its efforts as having "an established practice of releasing information even when it may not be positive or flattering to the Council."
